

Probing the element content of marine plankton with synchrotron XRF

Benjamin S. Twining, Senior Research Scientist, Bigelow Laboratory for Ocean Science

Marine plankton play key roles in ocean biogeochemical cycles, but their element composition is difficult to assess with bulk analytical approaches. I will review sample preparation and applications of XRF to study different types of plankton from a variety of habitats.